

Erin Smith Ahrens, CFA, is an avid reader and has been familiar with Mamaroneck her whole life, having lived in Larchmont both as a young child as well as throughout the pandemic, before moving to Shore Acres in the spring of 2023. Libraries have always played a strong part in her life; when in elementary school, Erin loved showcasing her “Little People” collection in the Larchmont Library’s children’s section and she spent many of her middle school afternoons participating in the Darien Library Theater, in Darien, CT. Most recently, Erin and her family moved from the Upper West Side to Mamaroneck and her children, Brooke (13), Noah (10) and Bennett (7), have enjoyed borrowing books and spending time at the Mamaroneck Library. Since they were children, Erin’s children have visited their local library everywhere they have lived—spending countless hours in the St. Agnes New York Public Library, enjoying the summer reading programs at the Larchmont Library and since last year, visiting the Mamaroneck Library often.

Erin graduated from Duke University in 2003 with a B.A. in Classical Studies, Markets and Management Certificate and a K-5 Elementary Education Teaching Certificate. After college, she worked as an equity analyst for Argus Research where she was ranked as a top analyst in the Wall Street Journal’s Best on the Street surveys numerous times and was ranked as a top analyst for the Financial Times. She earned her Chartered Financial Analyst designation in 2008.

Erin has held various volunteer roles including serving as a Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault advocate through the SAVI and DOVE programs in NYC, PTA President for Montclare Children’s School in Manhattan, member and co-chairs of numerous committees for the New York Junior League, Treasurer for the DAR NYC Council, Steering Committee for the Junior Council for the American Museum of Natural History, member of the NYPL Young Lions committee and co-chair/member of various PTA committees for Trinity School in Manhattan. She has also been a class parent numerous times for each of her three children. Currently, she is serving a two-year term as Treasurer for the Rye Neck PTSA. Erin loves to read, play tennis, needlepoint and spend time with her husband, three children, two dogs, and geck
